| Description | This course has been set up to make all Prep. students better learners; it exposes them to some fundamentals of studying at a university, and trains them to be better at learning language. The course is based on consciousness raising activities allied with practical exercises. |
| Objectives | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Acquainting students with the concept of self-directed learning, and to wean them off more schoolish notions of the roles of student and teacher; - Introducing (and checking student understanding of) the academic requirements of the Prep. Program; - Teaching self-management, including: goal setting; time management; and self-care through the maintenance of a balance between study, social life, and health; - Ensuring that students have at least rudimentary study skills, including: techniques for language learning; strategies for working cooperatively; and an awareness of the general exigencies of Academic Integrity; - Ensuring that students have adequate IT skills that will facilitate their learning of English, including familiarity with the university's learning management and information systems. |
| Learning Outcomes | At the end of the Learning to Learn 100 course, learners will be able to: LO1. organise themselves in order to meet the Prep. Program's academic requirements (course work, assignments, personal study, and assessments), while remaining healthy and sociable; LO2. use IT skills necessary for both navigating the AGU Prep. Program and enhancing their learning of English; LO3. apply effective study skills, including: learning new vocabulary; taking, organising, and reviewing notes; LO4. demonstrate understanding of the absolute requirement to complete assignments in an academically honest manner; LO5. continue their studies in a self-directed manner (knowing where to find support as required, and how to access materials for autonomous study). |
